

Being an effective supervisor – new guidelines

Published on 18 May 2022

How to build better relationships, give constructive feedback and support wellbeing

News 2 mins read

We've released new guidelines on effective supervision to support managers to develop themselves and their staff.

The guidelines provide clear, evidence-based advice on:

- simple things supervisors can do to support their staff in being the best at their role
- actions chief constables can take to help supervisors

Having a good supervisor can make a big difference to job performance, development and wellbeing. The new guidelines aim to provide greater consistency in how forces support everyone working and volunteering in the police service.

Although they were created for anyone who manages staff, the guidelines can also help officers, staff, special constables and other volunteers to understand what to expect from their leaders.

Read more

- Effective supervision guidelines
- Leadership standards

Tags

Leadership development Supervision CPD