

Knowledge sharing

Projects funded by round three of the Safer Streets Fund.

First published 18 March 2022

1 min read

Round three of the Safer Streets Fund has an emphasis on the safety of women and girls, primarily through the design and management of public spaces. On 3 October 2021, the Home Office announced that 57 projects had been awarded grant funding, including the British Transport Police.

The successful bids comprise a range of creative interventions, including:

- bystander training programmes
- guardianship schemes
- street pastors
- taxi marshals
- safe haven spaces
- educational and awareness raising initiatives working with schools and young people
- personal safety applications
- the use of a theatre production to challenge attitudes and behaviours

A 2019 report by the Local Government Association, Approaches to managing the night-time economy, provides some case studies involving policing and other partner agencies.

Tags

Violence against women and girls