

Restorative justice - Guidance overview

Evidence briefing about restorative justice

First published 18 January 2022

Restorative justice is the process of repairing harm caused by criminal behaviour. It involves communication between those harmed by crime or conflict and those responsible for it.

The purpose of this briefing is to inform readers about restorative justice (RJ) by explaining:

- what RJ is
- how it works
- how it can be used by the police
- the evidence of its effectiveness
- how much it costs
- how it can be implemented
