

Joining as a police support volunteer

How to become a police support volunteer (PSV) and help your local force make a difference in the community.

First published 14 January 2021

Becoming a police service volunteer (PSV) offers the opportunity to do something worthwhile in your spare time, making a real difference to your local police force and community.

The roles performed by PSVs vary hugely within and between police forces. Subject to relevant vetting, you can assist with a wide variety of tasks.

Some of the duties carried out by PSVs include:

- manning police station front counters
- general administrative work
- vehicle maintenance
- criminal investigation support
- updating victims and witnesses
- CCTV monitoring
- work relating to the professional skills you already have

There is no minimum hour requirement, but volunteer teams work with PSVs to ensure the role gives the maximum impact, and hours are discussed during the application process.

How to apply

Anyone over the age of 16 can apply to be a PSV. Volunteers come from all walks of life, each bringing their own skills and specialisms.

Each police force advertises roles for which they need voluntary support. If you have skills that you wish to offer the police, contact the force you are interested in to see how they can create a role to maximise the skills you have.

Many police forces welcome university students who are required to spend a year in industry, and can offer unique experiences in a range of business areas.

All applicants must be vetted as they will be directly supporting officers and staff in their roles.
