- The Centre for Police Productivity would like to hear about innovations that are freeing up officer and staff time. Have you successfully reduced administrative burden or streamlined processes in your force? We can also provide benefits management support, helping forces to identify, measure, track and evidence the outcomes and efficiencies delivered through change and innovation. Email us at productivity@college.police.uk
- The practice bank is made up of shared interventions that have been implemented by policing and crime reduction and community safety organisations. These have been used to address specific crime problems or organisational change.
- South Yorkshire Police host a national police benefits realisation working group network. This contains practitioners from police forces across the country who can also assist. Email them at Benefits_Realisation@southyorkshire.police.uk
- Business owners and project managers can use the practical evaluation tools. This group can assist and share data points that they have identified in their work.
- The National Police Chiefs' Council (NPCC) Prevention Coordination Committee has published guidance on economic analysis for police practitioners.
- The Government Efficiency Framework establishes a framework for how we should categorise and track the efficiencies we are delivering.
- Information in the benefit types appendix is used in benefits management and may be required to support any assurance reviews.
